Uncle Sam's Weather Work. From the St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Uncle Sam is right in spending a good deal of money on weather. He watches it everywhere in his broad domain with everywhere in his broad domain with every known delicate instrument, and, wisely dismissing faulty forecasts, tries to get closer to the business of to-morrow. Europe, for all its experience, has done no better, if as well. Observations run back there 200 years, and no two of the long-range philosophers agree. They have tabulated the level of lakes, the movement of glaciers, the freezing and liberation of rivers, the seasonal traits of vegetation, and the periodicity of sunverse. EXPERT CHAIR CANING, FURNITURE RE-paired and refinished, floors refinished; mail orders vegetation, and the periodicity of sunspots, all to no particular purpose as yet in establishing weather rotation. On the Saul's Addition to Washington—John C. Nyquist et rocks is scratched the testimony of great icecaps that advanced and retreated but icecaps that advanced and retreated but icecaps that advanced and retreated, but man is not particularly interested in a range as long as that. He would like to be able to see two days ahead, and trust that in indulging the hope he is not chasing a rainbow.
